THE CATHOLIC CAMPUS PARISH OF THE UNIVERSITY OF NEW MEXICO

PARISH MISSION STATEMENT

The Aquinas Newman Center is a permanent Community of the Catholic Faithful, established as a parish of the Archdiocese of Santa Fe at the University of New Mexico. While its primary mission is to the University Students, Faculty, Staff and Administrators, the parish community genuinely welcomes all who wish to participate in the work and worship of the parish. As a Newman Center, we have the mission of proclaiming the Word of God and presenting theology to an academic community that finds in our parish an intellectual and spiritual basis for becoming and remaining committed Roman Catholics.

Thinking Out of the Box

I wake up to a dim light entering into my cardboard box; my face is cold and my feet numb in a freezing straightjacket of a sleeping bag. It is 6:18 in the morning, a time that I can safely say that I usually sleep through most Sunday mornings. And when I do wake up, I'm not cold, tangled or tired. But that is not the case today—today I wake up exposed to the outside. How did I get here? Perhaps, that is a question that some ask everyday, but I know why I wake up outside.

Project Box is an annual event held at the Newman Center meant to raise awareness about homelessness in our community. Participants of Project Box spend the night outside to expose the homelessness that is overlooked by people, since it takes place in the “lesser” places of our community: the places that we are eager to forget and quick to pass through (or avoid) on our commute to work/home/shopping. Besides being a visual demonstration against homelessness, Project Box's main objective was to invoke thoughtful, prayerful and serious discussion about the needs of this neglected population and what realistic and sustainable solution was necessary.

We had a guest that evening--a homeless woman, who, unlike the many biases that exist, does not have a substance abuse addiction nor was she an alcoholic. Before she became homeless, her life was like that of many who live pay check to pay check. Losing her job was the push that lead the dominoes as they fell in sequence. Now she does not have a stable home to go to every night, so camps outside in a sleeping bag in spots that she feels safe. As she detailed her daily routine, it became clear that although it may seem that the homeless population does absolutely nothing everyday, much activity occurs and the majority of a homeless person's time is spent on what takes people who have basic resources minutes. Some points she mentioned are 1) everything from eating to getting clothing to showering involves waiting in lines for hours; 2) to add time to waiting in line, people who are homeless must walk everywhere (unless they gather enough change for the bus); 3) they must carry all their belongings, or, stash quantities of their belongings (which is extremely risky) in areas around the city. From this aspect, it becomes obvious that most time is spent tending to everyday, basic needs. When one task is finished, there is no time to waste before the next one is begins, or in many cases, is already over. An important addition to the problem of a large portion of the community being consciously unaware of homelessness is a homeless person must stay out of sight so not to be harassed. There is a balance in appearance that must be met because if someone looks too nice and like he/she has nice belongings or money, he/she runs the risk of being mugged. On the other hand, if someone looks too unkempt, he/she is in danger of being noticeable—a nuisance and harassed by law enforcement.

This discussion made me realize that perhaps the needs of the homeless population were not being truly met because after all, we are not homeless and are reluctant to perceive homelessness for what it is. It is true that we must consider sustainable and measurable improvements on how to approach this issue, but crafting sustainable solutions might easier if we perceive homelessness as if we were homeless ourselves. In order to find a solution that works--a solution that suits the needs of those who lack a home--we must think out of the box.

So, after singing the last song, let’s move our fellowship to the gathering space as soon as possible so that others may be given the time they need in the sanctuary. Thank you!
